"The Authority on Authorities"

MANY a contract is beaten betrick for the defenders, a trick which could have been saved by more careful play There is some one best way to play each combination of cards, in order to produce the greatest possible likelihood of success with it, and the players who have studied them do manipulation. The expert knows a lot of such combinations intimately Whenever they arrive. they are recognized as old friends The average player has not the time to learn them all, but he can master certain underlying princi-

We have all seen otherwise fair players misplay such simple combinations. The usual mistake is to finesse the 9 or 10 on the first or second round, and lose to a singleton or doubleton J. For protection against a singleton, a first trick should be taken with a high honor with every one of those clarer's own hand, because that | South plan his play for 5-Clubs

SHUTTING OUT AN HONOR

MANY a contract is beaten because some low honor takes a trick for the defenders, a trick Which could have been saved by more careful play There is some one best way to play each combination of cards, in order to produce the greatest possible likelihood of success with it. and the not lose many tricks in their manipulation. The expert knows a lot of such combinations intimately Whenever they arrive, they are recognized as old friends The average player has not the time to learn them all, but he can master certain underlying principles which will help him with a arge number of combinations.

Basic factors operate with such combinations as the spade suits shown below, if the declarer is striving to take all of the tricks. granting plenty of entries into both his own hand and dummy ↑Q954 ↑Q542 ♠ A K 10 6 ♠ A K 10 6 ♠ A K 6 5 ♠ Q 10 5 4 ♠ A K Q 10

♠ A K 10 8 ♠ Q 9 7 6 We have all seen otherwise fair players misplay such simple combinations. The usual mistake is to finesse the 9 or 10 on the first or second round, and lose to a singleton or doubleton J. For protection against a singleton, a first trick should be taken with a high honor with every one of those combinations, one of those in declarer's own hand, because that still leaves him another high one on this deal?

and his original finessing position. With No 4, a second high one also should be taken in that hand.

With No 1, a second high trick should be taken in one hand or the other, depending on which defender the declarer thinks is more likely to have the J. as that protects him against a doubleton J before finessing. With No. 2 the second trick should be taken in dummy preserving finessing chances the only way the finesse can be taken. For similar reasons, with No 3 the second trick should be taken in declarer's hand.

With No 5, after the first high trick, declarer should lead his 10, as some hapless player, who has heard about "covering an honor with an honor" may foolishly put a well-guarded J on it and thus prevent a guess. If the J is not played, take the Q and then lead the 9, if the next defender decides to cover, your guessing is over.

By Garry Cleveland Myers, D. D. Most eating problems begin be into the baby. It might be desirable to do a bit of "pushing" of a new food, if only a small morsel of the food (no bigger than a soup bean) s gently put into the unwilling Even then, if there is strong resistance it were better give up and try it later.

If the baby constantly closes the against a certain kind of food, turns the head, pushes the spoon away showing annoyance, it is the time to end the meal. Don't substitute another food. Give the child lots of water and fruit juice but no milk, except at night perhaps, until a small portion of the offered food is wanted. Not many mothers will accept this advice since they "can't bear to see the baby go hungry," and they are sure he needs the food, the more so as they check on the child's weight. They are thinking of immediate intake of nourishment, not on the kind of appetite which, with persistence, can be cultivated and

od in Giving Baby a New Food

By Garry Cleveland Myers, D. D. Most eating problems begin be into the baby. It might be desirable to do a bit of "pushing" of a new food, if only a small morsel of the food (no bigger than a soup bean) is gently put into the unwilling mouth. Even then, if there strong resistance it were better to give up and try it later.

If the baby constantly closes the mouth against a certain kind of food, turns the head, pushes the spoon away showing annoyance, i is the time to end the meal. Don't substitute another food. Give the child lots of water and fruit juice but no milk, except at night perhaps, until a small portion of the mothers will accept this advice since they "can't bear to see the baby go hungry," and they are sure they check on the child's weight kind of appetite which, with persistence, can be cultivated and
